Charging the Goalkeeper

By L. A. W. Pearce.

In the March number of "Football Monthly," Charles Buchan has a lot to say about "charging the goalkeeper." I can only give you a summary of his ideas in the space available, but they make horse sense.

I'll give you the first few paragraphs: "Charging the goalkeeper has led to so many unseemly incidents, both in International and League games, that the time has come for a drastic change to be made in the law.

"It is a fact that only teams in the four home countries carry out this archaic law. On the Continent and in South America, charging the goalkeeper is virtually taboo by general consent.

"My proposal is that a goalkeeper should not be allowed to handle the ball outside the goal area, and that no charging the goalkeeper should be permitted within the goal area.

"This is a simple solution to the problem, and I hope will be given serious consideration by the powers-that-be. In fact, it is so simple that I wonder that it has not been thought of long ago.

"Now, the goalkeeper, of course, can handle the ball anywhere within the penalty area, a vast space that gives him a lot of scope and invites charging by oncoming forwards.

"The goal-area is at present 20 yards long and six yards in depth. If that should be considered too small an area for my proposed change, then increase the depth to eight yards. Personally, I think the area is big enough as it is now.

"The beauty of the proposal is that it would entail little change in the laws of the game, for there is no law that states specifically where a goalkeeper can or cannot handle the ball. It is covered by Law 12, which says that handling a ball is an offence except where it applies to the goalkeeper within his own penalty area.

"The substitution of goal-area for penalty-area and the amendment of Clause 4 of the law to read 'Charging the goalkeeper in his own penalty area' would be all that was required."

He goes on to set out six reasons why such an amendment would be advantageous:

1. Uniformity when British teams are playing Continental and foreign teams.
2. Would allow more flowing movements approaching goal. Now many promising moves are negated by the goalie advancing up to 18 yards from goal and cutting off many centres and long passes.

3. Increase rate of goal-scoring.
4. Would check present tendency for goalies to dominate the penalty-area.
5. Would do away with those irritating periods when the goalie holds on to the ball and carries it to the penalty-line before clearing.
6. Passing back to the goalie would be the last resource of a defender. Too risky.

The article should be read as a whole. He certainly seems to have got something there.

Is Artistry Becoming Too Important?

By Len Young.

I cannot be certain, of course, because the origin of "Laws" introduced into the game of Soccer was so long ago that the true policy underlining the move is shrouded in the mists of time, but I feel it must have been as follows:—

"TO hold the balance between sheer strength and skill which gave the less physically endowed the opportunity to participate in a game to satisfy the keen and natural desire of young men to indulge in vigorous physical contact."

Watching a game of intricate tactics with a very occasional accidental clash of bodies which instantly becomes the subject of apology by the "offending player," and a stern reprimand by the referee, leaves me bored to tears.

You must have heard or seen a gesture of applause when a player, by clever footwork, has beaten an opponent; or when a goalkeeper performs even one of the simpler tasks expected of him; or was it because a shot for goal had been directed between the posts, and not outside or over them?

But how many times has the sight of a player sent sprawling by a delightfully executed shoulder to shoulder charge caused cheers? Yet, who will say that a perfect body contact is any less of a skill than the other examples referred to?

Watching the games this season, and noticing how few teams combine clever foot and head work together with body contact has often caught me wondering whether in this particular part of the globe, anyhow, we have not strayed from the true spirit of this great game.

More important still, are we handicapping the player who, perhaps a little less endowed than his fellow-performers in the art of foot-craft, has nevertheless raised himself to their level by virtue of his mastery of the shoulder charge? I sincerely hope not, and referees have a very important say in this matter.

So, may we help in our various ways, the coach by spending a little more time on this skill; the club managers in charge of players, who perhaps have been kept in ignorance of this phase of the game in their part of the world, by simple explanation; and the spectators, by giving more applause.

Most vital of all, those players who put on an act like a temperamental opera star when floored legitimately, please remember: "It's a man's game."

1. NEW RULE: Junior Clubs in all age groups, and in both League and Cup games, may now substitute one player during any period of the game. However, once a player has been changed, the player who has left the field cannot return should another player be injured; neither can the twelfth man replace any player sent from the field of play for misconduct. In all cases where an extra player is used his name must be written on the team card.

Paul Jordan, Sandringham City's star centre-forward of former years, made a come-back last week against Croydon. Although out of condition, he scored a brilliant goal.

The Management of Sports Injuries

Prevention of Accidents

The athlete who hurts himself just before a big event for which he is training, often provides a difficult problem in handling, and sometimes it is almost impossible to give him effective treatment. He may find it hard to face the disappointment of not being fit. Friends, Club members and others interested in the results badger him with advice and suggestions of different and better doctors and unqualified practitioners. Usually, also, his actual condition is either much worse or even a lot better than he admits.

NO athlete should be allowed to resume fit. A substitute is in most instances better than a damaged member of the team.

Sports and games are not free from accidents, but if we wish these to be as few as possible there are certain things we must remember.

It is advisable to keep in the Club a special book in which we may record fully all the accidents and their resulting injuries, and we should enquire fully into each incident. All injuries should be reported.

It is only by the study of the mechanism of all injuries that efficient preventive measures against accidents may be instituted, and these measures must be based on a knowledge of exact causation.

It will be found that most accidents could have been avoided if the factors concerned in their occurrence had been appreciated and explained. Co-operation will reduce the number of athletic accidents to a bare minimum.

The causative factors may be grouped under Equipment and Personnel.

EQUIPMENT.

Deficiencies and bad arrangement of equipment are responsible for many troubles. Playing fields, and equipment, such as footwear, balls, ropes, attachments, etc., need to be carefully designed and maintained and regularly inspected.

PERSONNEL.

Players should be fit and well trained and warm up satisfactorily, and should be free from infection.

In Clubs one of the most important factors in prevention is adequate supervision.

Lack of supervision and consequent uncontrolled activities invite accidents. Experienced coaches have fewer accidents than the inexperienced.

Accidents are more common at the beginning of the season and among players who are not in training, and fewer where the teams and players are well matched.

ACCIDENT PRONENESS.

Some individuals through natural clumsiness and inefficient co-ordination, lack of acute perception, or some other physical or psychological defect, are accident-prone. Such should be detected early and closely watched.

The majority of accidents happen to a minority of people who are accident-prone. They are not only a danger to themselves, but cause damage to other people.

Each individual's proneness to accidents varies during the day, with rest or fatigue, and also during life, being greater in youth and in old age.

Athletes are very accident-prone, as they push themselves physically into the limits of co-ordination and effort.

At all meetings, some trained medical personnel should be present (doctor, physiotherapist, etc.), as not only are they available for treatment, but by their presence they give extra confidence and less accidents. Unqualified personnel could do more harm than good. They not having sufficient knowledge can aggravate even a simple injury by trying to do more than they should.

Any injury, abrasion or blister should be treated at once, and an antiseptic dressing or strapping applied at once. Neglect of slight skin wounds often results in infection and serious complication.

Second Division

By DON SUTHERLAND.

SECOND DIVISION NORTH

It appears that the premiership of this League is going to be a close fight between four teams—Corio, Lions, Croatia and Florentina. Croatia's defeat of Lions last week was a very important victory for the Geelong Club, and the Lions v. Corio game to-day will be a needle match for both Clubs. With home ground advantage, Lions are favoured to win. Florentina have their strong defence to thank for being so close to the leaders. If they can improve their forward line they could easily fulfil the high hopes held for them after their meritorious Club debut last season.

Heidelberg showed a return to form by easily defeating St. Albans, while University defeated Commonwealth Fertilisers in a high scoring game; but the students will have to improve if they are to hold Heidelberg to-day.

Fairfield do not appear to be up to the standard of previous years, and will be struggling to-day to register their first win of the season against Commonwealth Fertilisers.

SECOND DIVISION SOUTH

Last week's games confirmed previous opinions when Sicilia gave Vic. Police their second consecutive defeat by a narrow one goal margin. The Police face another hard battle to-day when they travel to Sandringham City, who registered their third win in a row by defeating a game Croydon team, 2-1.

However, Croydon's strong defence should enable them to defeat disappointing Moorabbin City to-day if their enthusiastic young forwards take their chances.

Sicilia will not have an easy task against F.N.D., but if they are able to field their usual side they should win.

Ferntree Gully's forwards were on the mark against Moorabbin, and should have no trouble in accounting for a moderate Rosebud side.

Only one point now separates the five leading teams, and any lapse at this stage could easily be fatal to premiership hopes.

The clean play and sporting attitude of Clubs in this Division is worthy of note, and could well be an example to Clubs in other Leagues.

Rootes' team to play Yarraville Bison this week will include a new-comer in Gentile as goalkeeper. Vammit also returns to the side.

CLUB NEWS

After 14 years of valuable playing service to Jewish soccer in Victoria, Issy Peters has announced his retirement. His decision was brought about by the recurrence of a knee injury, and Maccabi regret having to lose the services of this brilliant player.

Although Box Hill played badly against Hakoah last Saturday, the "Hillies" are confident of "tossing" J.U.S.T. this Saturday. They always seem to find form against J.U.S.T., and on both occasions on which the teams met last year, the result was a draw.

In their important match against Slavia, Moreland had the edge for most of the game, but could not penetrate Slavia's defence. Nevertheless, Slavia wasted a number of scoring chances.

If his sprained ankle has mended, Heyes will replace Denny in South Melbourne United's team to play Richmond this week. Cottrell goes back to right-wing in place of Greer, although the latter played quite a reasonable game last Saturday.

Against Park Rangers at Middle Park to-day, Frankston hope to register their first win for the season.

The most important advance in Park Rangers' history takes place on Saturday, May 17, when the club rooms will be officially opened. In the past, comfort was an unknown quantity as far as Rangers were concerned, but with lots of hard work on the part of officials all mod. cons., including showers, will be available. Entrance will be by car under the railway at Middle Park Station, and behind the bowling green.

Because of a sprained ankle, E. Fuchs will be unable to play for Bayswater against Olympia to-day.

Bayswater will hold a grand ball on July 12. Any Soccer enthusiasts looking for a really good night out should ring the Secretary (BM 5306; day).

Sandringham City's Alan Barritt, Reserve right-winger, came into the first team against Croydon and played extremely well, scoring City's third goal. Alan is superbly fit and always plays with determination and courage.

Blackpool to See "Bells Are Ringing"

Mr. Garnet H. Carroll, Patron of the Soccer Association, and his guests, are very excited about the visit of the Blackpool Soccer team to "Bells Are Ringing" at the Princess Theatre on Friday night, May 30.

After the performance they will say "Hello" to the two English stars of "Bells," Miss Shani Wallis and Mr. Bruce Trent.
